Wetlands conference set in Jackson December 8

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

The Mississippi Department of Economic and Community Development (MDECD), is sponsoring a wetlands conference Dec. 8 at the Trade Mart Building.

The definition of wetlands and its impact on economic development in Mississippi will be the subject of the conference.

The conference will feature experts on wetlands, members of the state's Congressional delegation, and Congressman Jimmy Hayes of Louisiana.

"The current federal definition of wetlands is so broad that it is affecting the development of many of our state's publicly owned industrial parks and private property," Governor Kirk Fordice said. "This conference will be an important forum for anyone involved in land development to learn about this issue and Congress's efforts in this area."

Tyler case goes to grand jury

District Attorney Cono Caranna reported Wednesday that a grand jury will be presented results from an investigation into the September 24 death of Waveland-held Alabama resident Tommy Monroe "Toby" Tyler.

Tyler and a 26-year-old woman were arrested by Waveland police at 12:52 a.m. that day. At 5:03 a.m., Tyler was pronounced dead at Hancock Medical Center.

Tyler's family claimed he was beaten while in police custody, while an autopsy report by New Orleans pathologist Dr. Paul McGarry showed a heart attack as the cause of death.

McGarry also stated the autopsy revealed a long-standing heart disease and scars from previous heart attacks.

Tyler was charged with simple possession of marijuana, public drunkenness and failure to Church extends hand to community in construction of family life center

BY TRACI BONNEY

The members of Power House of Deliverance Church wanted to contribute something to the community, so they got out their mortar spreaders, hammers and paint rollers.

The result is the Bishop J.H. Covington Family Life Center, located behind the church on Washington Avenue north of Hwy. 90.

The building itself is pleasing to view — colorful flowers in brick-lined beds around the front porch, red parquet brick-work for the interior hall floors and carpet in the various rooms, decorative light fixtures and window valances, a color scheme that is both restful and refreshing.

One room is the ministers' lounge, where the pastoral staff and visiting ministers can view tapes, read, pray or simply relax. The wall-mounted television is topped by a pair of tennis shoes and a baseball cap.

"Those belonged to Bishop Covington, the man we named the center after," Pastor Jeff Reed explained. "He founded our church and several others."

Chamber sets education goals

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

Education was the prime theme for the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's November Morning Edition.

Kathy Fernandez, chamber education chairman was the keynote speaker.

Fernandez said, "A group of concerned community leaders got together initially in January of this year to begin to study the American 2000 Program put out to help the educational needs of this nation."

The goals were the outcome of a national Governor's summit to help address the nation's educational crisis.

"We are using it in Hancock County to address our issues and are redefining our goals," Fernandez added.

Several meetings were held with public officials, school superintendents, teachers, parents and even students.

Fernandez continued, "Their

A two-way street

Parents benefit from Chapter I program at Gulfview

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

They looked awfully peculiar, these 10 adults sitting on child-sized chairs, but they didn't care; they were there to learn.

Twice a month Gulfview Elementary School hosts a computer class for the parents of students wishing to know what their children are learning.

The intent is for the parents to be able to better assist their children at home with their studies, by having firsthand knowledge of subject content and individual progress.

Rose Acker, Hancock School District Chapter I coordinator, explained, "So many of today's lessons are being taught on computers. If a child goes home and says, 'I can't get that line of symmetry correct,' or speaks of a congruent, the average parent will have no idea to what the child is referring."

When parents enter the room, they are assigned a computer and instructed how to gain access to the 33 programs available.

A portion of the two hours is spent with a presentation by Acker on various ways to assist one's child with studies in the home environment.

It may deal with how to create a study area conducive to concentration, or how to recognize social difficulties through behavioral changes.

Another portion of the evening is spent by parents reviewing their children's work. They are given a progress scale which reports each child's level of achievement to date in each study area.

The parents can view the exact lessons upon which the child works daily, giving the them the ability to review and maintain a grasp of the material being presented.

All remaining time is used by the parent for work in areas of their own personal interest.

There are computer programs in GED preparation; math and English review; keyboard skills; computer literacy; introduction to data processing with COBOL; computer science with Pascal; English as a second language; and adult language skills, to name a few.

The majority of the parents present expressed a dual desire: to understand their children's progress and improve their own skills.

Mamie O'Quinn was there to learn of her grandson's progress and to acquaint herself with computers.

"My husband has a computer and I want to use his. Who knows, I may want to write my autobiography one day."

Another woman was taking advantage of the GED preparation program after viewing her daughter's lessons.

And yet another woman, who claimed to currently be working as a substitute teacher, said, "I'm here to refresh my schooling. I have been out of school so many years, I feel this will help me to be better in my job."

There was only one man present.

He sat next to his wife and watched her operate the keyboard as she called up study programs for each of their four children.

He explained that he was there at the request of one of his children. "I can't read. My son told me, 'Dad, you need to learn to read.'"

Cub Scout Pack 207 recycles ton of aluminum

Special to the Echo

BY ERIC ROSS

Bay St. Louis Cub Scout Pack 207, sponsored by Soundation Mobile Music, has recycled more than a ton of aluminum.

Cubmaster Keely Rasmussen said, "It started out as a pack conservation project in 1991 to help the boys earn their world conservation badges. Each boy was required to recycle at least one garbage bag of aluminum cans to learn about how recycling helps conserve energy and natural resources."

What started out as a learning process had grown into a year-around fund raiser for the pack. Rasmussen explained that the recycling project pays for most of the awards the boys earn throughout the year.

Local businesses, utility companies and individuals donate their cans on a regular basis through containers provided by Pack 207. Each week, Rasmussen collects the aluminum and sells it to a commercial recycler.

Those interested in donating aluminum cans may call the pack switchboard at 255-9003, extension 501, and leave a message, or take the cans to Mississippi Power Company on Hwy. 90 at Dunbar in Bay St. Louis, where a recycling drum is located in the lobby.

To celebrate the "one-ton milestone," Pack 207 is planning a pizza party for all the Cub Scouts in the pack.

Those interested in Scouting as a youth or adult may call the pack switchboard.

He and I used to do a lot of walking together.

"When we dedicated the center back in July, my wife was here. She gave us the shoes and cap. I'm planning for us to put a display case in the hall outside, and we'll put those in it. They're a continuing reminder for us of his dedication and faith."

The center also has a meeting room that serves a number of functions, from classroom to football stadium.

Reed said young people work in the room when they are being tutored or while taking Biblically-based self-esteem classes. Students who avail themselves of the center will receive tutoring in math, reading and computers; attend Bible orientation classes Wednesday evenings; and participate in self-confidence/self-esteem classes.

"We want to take time at a young age and teach them how to move from intimidation to victory," Reed commented.

The center also supplies high school students and their parents with orientation in choosing a college and courses to prepare the young people for their future careers.

The meeting room also serves as the place for church dinners, men's and women's meetings, and the gathering of the congregation's football fans to watch Monday night games.

A small kitchen nearby allows visiting ministers and congregation members who come from a distance to have their Sunday meals between services without having to go to a restaurant. Reed said the kitchen is used often, as some of the church's 150 members come from as far as Mobile, Slidell and points west.

The recreation room sports two pool tables and a couple of video game machines. A small room just off the recreation area serves as the church's bookstore.

The family life center was built over a three-year period. "We built as we went along, as the money came in," Reed said. "The church members themselves built the center."

"We wanted to offer something to the community. That's why we did this."

Buz Olsen, Hancock Port and Harbor executive director said, "This conference is an opportunity to take this dilemma state-wide and basically show the rest of the developers that this problem is not just a focus on the Coast."

"It is not just a concern with lowlands in the Coastal region, it is also a concern of development—economic and residential, throughout the state," Olsen added.

Olsen continued, "We have our problems at Port Bienville Industrial Park, as we have acreage to use for industrial development, but are unable to do so because of the wetlands issue."

"When one considers Stennis Space Center has 40% of the land in fee and buffer zone in this county; add the agriculture acreage in the northern portion, and then what is already developed, and there is hardly anything left in this county for future growth because of the wetlands," Olsen stated.

He continued, "Then ask yourself, what does that do to one of the fastest growing counties in the state of Mississippi."

The conference which begins with registration at 8 a.m. will conclude at 2:15 p.m. and registration forms are available at the Port and Harbor's office, Highway 90, Waveland. Registration fee is $25 and it includes a meal.

Olsen said he plans on attending the meeting and urges all concerned to attend, as this is not a meeting opened to any special group, but to everyone.

Anyone seeking further information, are asked to call Olson at 467-9231.

Scheduled speakers include Gov. Foy D. White, MDECD executive director Jimmy Heidel, James W. Teaford of J.W. Teaford and Company, Bill Magee of the Miss. State Highway Dept., and Jimmy Hayes, featured speaker at the luncheon.

Chapter I

The man said that at first he was embarrassed, having to ask for help at his age. He appeared to be in his mid-twenties.

He said all his life, he has gone from one job to another, unable to hide his illiteracy for very long.

He related how his car had broken down, so he walked daily from Lakeshore to Port Bienville Industrial Park where he worked a short time. He recently lost another job at a fast food restaurant. "I was good fixing things, but they got tired of having to read to me (from the day's work list)."

The man commented that he doesn't care now who knows he can't read, because he is going to learn.

Though the class meets only twice a month, Acker and other Gulfview personnel are trying to arrange to allow the man access to the computers either prior to the school day or following it. Gulfview is within walking distance.

He stated, "I don't know if I can come more often, but I know I would profit, if I could."

The man's wife completed the review of the children's work and began the keyboard skills program. She applied for an office job, and was practicing her typing.

Acker reported the Chapter I program recently hired someone to work with any children needing to accompany their parents.

She said program funding can be used for the child care service as long as the children are engaged in educational activities which address drug awareness.

"The first night the group met," Acker reported, "we had about the same number of adults, but different people. Some did not return, others came once or twice."

She signed up two new parents that night.

The program will again take place tomorrow beginning at 6:30 p.m.

"Remember," Acker stated, "the aim and purpose is to be better parents at home, to be better able to help our children be better students."

"But all are welcome. We are not turning anyone away, though our funding states we are to serve the parents of our students. Who are we to say who will influence a child's education? Many people play a role in shaping a child's view of the world."

obey a police officer, and was set to be charged by the Narcotics Task Force for possession of crack cocaine.

The woman was charged with simple possession of marijuana. Tyler and the woman were reported to be with two other people on Beach Boulevard near Buccaneer State Park, where the arrests were made.

Tyler's mother, Dorothy Batton of Bay St. Louis, said her son called her from the police station about 3:30 a.m., complaining of being beaten and chest pains.

She added that upon viewing his body at a funeral home his eyes were bruised and parts of his facial bones flattened.

McGarry differed from Batton, stating to the Sun Herald in September that Tyler had only a few small bumps and bruises that did not contribute to his death.

Caranna explained that presentation of such cases before a grand jury follow a standard procedure.

Waveland officers Tony Stogner and Thomas Antoine remain suspended since September 25.

Former Forrest County Sheriff's Office employee and rookie Waveland policeman, Stogner, 26, was the attesting officer. He was suspended without pay, while Antoine, the assisting officer, was suspended with pay.

Caranna's office, the Mississippi Highway Patrol and the FBI conducted the investigation into Tyler's death.

thoughts, ideas and concerns redefined the national goals and created a Hancock 2000.

The goals of Hancock 2000 are:

—1. All children will come to school ready to learn, and parents will foster the desire to continue the learning process.

—2. Our local high school graduation rate will improve.

—3. Every school in Hancock County will offer a safe, disciplined environment conducive to learning and will be free of violence and drugs (tobacco and alcohol).

—Our children will leave grades, 4, 8, and 12 having demonstrated competency in challenging subject matter including English, history and geography and will excel in science and math.

—5. Every school in Hancock County will expose all students to the arts for quality of life to insure that all students learn to use their minds well, so that they may be prepared for responsible citizenship, further learning and productive employment in our modern community.

Fernandez indicated help from parents will be needed along with school officials to achieve the five Hancock 2000 goals.

Anyone interested in further information on the Hancock 2000 educational program, is asked to call the chamber at 467-9048.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Have you told Santa what you want for Christmas? This is the question many parents are asking their children, as Christmas is less than one month away. The question for Christmas gifts is not only for the youngsters, but adults too.

Prior to Christmas, Santa will make several visits to our area and will be happy to take requests from youngsters.

It seems the month of December will bring more Christmas-related events to Hancock County than ever this year.

We will be keeping you informed of them, hopefully prior to their happening.

In our Thursday edition, we carried the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Red Ribbon Christmas Celebration special section from merchants, which includes an extensive list of some of the things happening during December.

The variety of gifts for those of any age can be found right here at home. Our merchants have gifts and the makings of gifts to suit someone of any age.

There will be arguments as to what is the best type of a gift to give to that someone special at Christmas.

One of the latest ideas I heard is from a fellow employee. She suggested a person should put more of a personal touch into gifts.

Meaning that instead of just buying something already completed, they can either go and buy the materials to make something, or take a store-purchased item and personalize it.

For instance, they could buy several small items along with a basket and dress it up with ribbons and silk flowers in a special way.

Another thing a homemaker could do is purchase an attractive platter, and then fill it with homemade candy or cookies.

The shelves of our merchants are overflowing and the clerks are ready to help you make your selection. Remember, it pays to shop at home.

I always get tickled when I read the 'secret' ways second graders suggest to cook a turkey.

The 1992 second graders sure had some clever ways and I hope you took the time to read their 'secret' cooking techniques in last Thursday's editions.

I am sure when some these youngsters become adults, and read what they had to say some 15 or so years before, they will be tickled too.

By the way, without the help of our school administrators and teachers, we wouldn't be able to bring those messages to you. Thanks to them and the second graders too.

A conference to be held in Jackson on December 8 should be of concern to just about everyone who resides along the Coast.

The conference is sponsored by the Mississippi Department of Economic and Community Development (MDECD), is to give a federal definition of wetlands.

The wetlands issue is more of a problem than many of you may be aware of because it also has an effect on industrial development.

As a for instance, the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission has many acres of land at Port Bienvenue Industrial Park for development, but are unable to because of wetlands restrictions.

Things have been done along our waterways in prior years, which today are as illegal as a 'three-dollar bill' as the saying goes.

Just because you own a parcel of property, that doesn't mean you can build or do what you please with it, if it is in an area considered wetlands.

There are subdivisions in Hancock County that would not stand a chance today, if they were just being developed.

This conference in Jackson on December 8 is very important and I am hoping Hancock will have a good representation. It is a must for land developers and real estate agents.

Registration is $25 for the session and includes a meal.

Registration is from 8 to 8:30 a.m. and the session is scheduled to end at 2:15 p.m.

The conference is to be held at the Trade Mart Building in Jackson and the Mississippi Congressional Delegation is scheduled to be there.

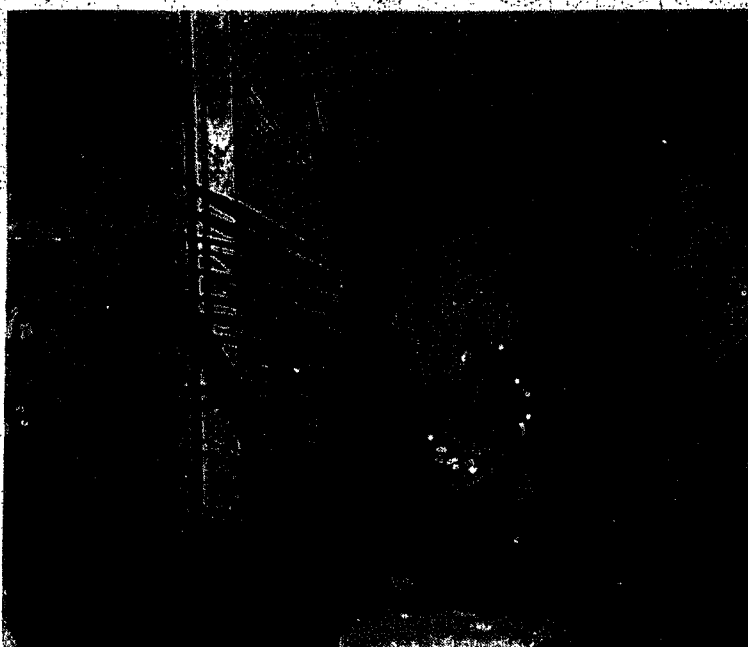

Those seeking further information can call Buz Olsen, Hancock County Port & Harbor Commission executive director, at 467-9231.

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

By Bill Minor

Gov. Fordice needs to select words wisely

A young Jackson rabbi last week had the best advice for Gov. Kirk Fordice he'll ever get: As a public official, you have an obligation to choose your words carefully when you speak.

Once again, Captain Kirk had fired from the lip. This time, it was the National Republican Governors' Conference in Lake Geneva, Wis. and he had managed to offend just about every Jew in America.

As most Mississippians know by now, Fordice had remarked at the conference that the United States is a "Christian nation" and any de-emphasis of the Christian religion by the Republican Party would lessen moral values and "create chaos." And when fellow Gov. Carroll Campbell reminded Fordice he omitted "Judeo" as part of the nation's heritage, Fordice fired back that he had done it intentionally.

The incident, which quickly became a nationwide news story and made the Mississippi governor the subject of critical commentary, obviously had embarrassing consequences for a Republican Party locked in a struggle to save the soul of the GOP from incursions of the Religious Right.

Unabashed by the furor created by his remarks and seemingly insensitive to how deeply they offended Jews, Fordice came back to Jackson the next day and told reporters he had no apologies for what he had said. He was stating merely a simple truth, Fordice declared.

That night on CNN's "Cross-fire" the craggy-faced Mississiippi governor renewed his contention that America should be called a "Christian country," just as much as Israel can be referred to as "a Jewish state."

By this time, the outrageous utterances form the mouth of the Fordician had pushed national Republican leaders past the point where they could stand quietly on the sidelines and not disavow such heresy. Forthcoming was a statement from GOP national chairman Rich Bond (who is remembers for opening the floodgates at the National convention in Houston to the Religious right) and signed by national as well as Mississippi party leaders, stressing belief in the nation's Judeo-Christian heritage.

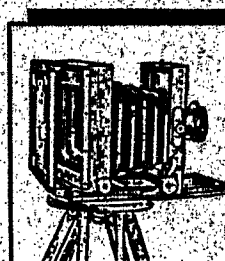

"We reject any statement that demeans Americans on the basis of religious beliefs," read the statement, adding: "ours is a party of inclusion."

Evidently, Fordice began to get the picture that he was becoming a pariah in his own party. He started scrambling for a way to retreat as though he had not been taken to the woodshed by his fellow Republicans.

Soby week's end, Fordice met with Rabbi Steven Engel of Jackson's Beth Israel congregation, and afterwards issued a statement which concluded: "I deeply regret any offense that any Mississippian might have taken at my remarks."

Certainly it was no mea culpa. Nowhere did Fordice say that he was wrong to have made the remarks to begin with, or Hancock County landowners Mrs. and Mrs. Clyde Brooke of Baton Rouge reported via telephone Saturday that news stories aired by a Gulf Coast Television Station were misleading to reference to Hinds County Court action. Mr. Brooke said, "If you heard the story, it sounded as if the South Mississippi Residents for Orderly Development, a group that opposed the construction of a 500,000 volt line across Jackson, Harrison, Hancock and Pearl River Counties, were denied a motion to delay an order allowing Mississippi Power Co. to build the high-voltage line." "The proceedings in reality intended to delay the eminent domain proceedings filed against myself, wife and son by Mississippi Power Company until the stay filed before Hinds County Chancellor Paul Alexander by the South Mississippi Residents for Orderly Development could be heard," Brooke said. The news story was not viewed by Brooke, but heard about it, and had someone from the television station read it to him.

Between seventy-five and one hundred people, consisting of girls from the Convent, (St. Joseph's Academy) sisters, public school teachers and pupils, and other interested friends with their Christmas cheer, were seen at Red Cross headquarters on Tuesday afternoon, wrapping Christmas packets to send to soldiers. Each packet contained a khaki-colored handkerchief, tablet, envelope, pencil, mirror, game, chewing gum, tobacco, pipe, and candy, wrapped carefully, and tied, with red and green cord, crocheted by High School girls.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire Caire

The traditional American holiday of Thanksgiving is, of course, not only a time for feasting, but also for giving thanks for our shared traditions and our blessings throughout the year.

And, so it has been ever since the first Thanksgiving Day when the Pilgrims and the Indians shared a meal and gave thanks for the harvest. And, of course, when the feasting is over, we must then try to think of tasty dishes to make from the left-over-whatsoever; for the family which sits down so happily to turkey or ham or other festive meal on Thanksgiving Day tends to turn up its "collective" nose, so to speak, after a day or so of meals from leftovers!

One of the easiest ways to make tasty use of the turkey or ham or "Chicken-and-soup-leftovers" is:

A young newcomer to Mississippi and the Jackson Jewish community, Engel, somewhat bewildered by the whole experience, put the best face possible on the governor's lame attempt to backtrack, accepting the statement as an apology. But in his meeting with Fordice, Engel said he cautioned the governor to be more careful in what he said.

Behind the scenes, there were some ugly signs that the whole episode has triggered a groundswell of anti-semitism. Harassing phone calls began coming to the synagogue and the rabbi after he was quoted in connection with the original

The November meeting of the Learning Ladies was held at the home of member Tommie Ziegler. Seven members and two guests attended. President Charlotte Edwards led the meeting. Members voted to present a $25 check to the Food Pantry as a Thanksgiving gift. Treasurer Reba Echezal said the check would be presented the day after the meeting.

Scrapbook chairman Peggy Mercier asked members to be sure all news items and snapshots are in by December 15 so she may complete the scrapbook for judging at the Extension Office in January 1993.

Edwards reminded members to complete their Homemakers Awards scoresheet and turn them in to Home Economist Darlene Underwood by the end of December.

The Learning Ladies Christmas luncheon will be held at the Waveland Resort Inn restaurant, the Galley, December 15 at 11:30 a.m.

The meeting was adjourned, and Ziegler gave a craft demonstration on how to make a snowman.

Santa Grams proceeds benefit Camp Rainbow

Santa Grams will send your child a personalized letter from Santa Claus and will help the American Cancer Society send some special children to summer camp.

Part of the proceeds from every Santa Grams order will be donated to American Cancer Society's Camp Rainbow, Mississippi's special camp for children with cancer.

Santa Grams are beautifully written and designed letters from St. Nick, himself. The letters, complete with a North Pole return address, are mailed the week before Christmas. They are ordered by grandparents, parents, godparents, aunts, uncles, and friends. (There are also older child and adult letters available for innocent pranks).

Not only will you be delighting a child, but you'll also be helping Mississippi children with cancer enjoy a summer camp experience. Camp Rainbow is not only designed to handle special needs, but also to develop self-confidence, self-expression and independence.

To order a Santa Gram, send

$5 check or money order, along with the child's (or adult's) name, sex, age, and address to: Santa Grams, 850 E. River Place, Suite 304, Jackson, MS 39202

All orders must be received by Dec. 10.

Kiwanis Club chartered

Group celebrates with dinner at Bay-Waveland Yacht Club

The Hancock County Kiwanis Club recently celebrated its inception with a Charter Night Dinner at the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club. The local club was chartered with the help of the Orange Grove club.

Representatives and officers from clubs in Picayune, Metairie, Baton Rouge, Pascagoula, Biloxi, Orange Grove and Gulfport attended the charter ceremony.

The local Kiwanis Club is a member of Kiwanis International, the worldwide association of Kiwanis Clubs. Currently, there are 8,928 clubs with 332,149 members in 82 nations and geographic areas.

Each Kiwanis Club sponsors a variety of service and fund raising projects, selected by the club to meet local needs. Last year, Kiwanis Clubs contributed more than 25 million man hours and raised $73 million (U.S. dollars) for service activities.

Net proceeds of all local fund raising is devoted to local service projects; club expenses are paid by members' dues.

The Kiwanis Club of Hancock County meets each Tuesday at J's Restaurant in Choctaw Plaza, Waveland, for lunch, transacting club business and listening to a prominent speaker. The speaker for December 1 is Len Giacani, marketing director for Casino Magic. Congressman Gene Taylor is scheduled for December 15.

Local club officers, recently elected, include Mike Tartavouille, president; Roger James, vice president; Linda Cagle, treasurer, and Bernard Chevalier Jr., secretary. The board of directors includes Sherlyn Breland, Coco Loiacano, Nancy Ladner, Jennifer Haas and Billy Brunson.

For information on joining the Kiwanis Club, call 467-0594 or 467-6589.

Kiwanis Club vice president Roger James presents Bay High senior Jennifer Labat with the Kiwanis Academic Certificate at the Charter Night Dinner. The certificate is awarded to one of the county's outstanding students each month; a trophy will be awarded to the "Academic Student of the Year," selected by a panel of judges, at the end of the school year.

At the Hancock County Kiwanis Club's Charter Night Dinner, president Randall Tartavouille receives the club's Kiwanis banner from Orange Grove Kiwanis president Mike Ellsberry.

Kiwanis Club District Governor Gregory Cruice presents the Kiwanis charter to Hancock County Kiwanis Club president Randall Tartavouille.
